New York Outlaws Trans Fat

City eateries must eliminate artery-clogging ingredient

NEW YORK | The Board of Health voted Tuesday to make New York the nation's first city to ban artery-clogging artificial trans fats at restaurants — from the corner pizzeria to high-end bakeries.

The board, which passed the ban unanimously, did give restaurants a slight break by relaxing what had been considered a tight deadline for compliance.

Restaurants will be barred from using most frying oils containing artificial trans fats by July and will have to eliminate the artificial trans fats from all of their foods by July 2008.

But Dan Fleshler, a spokesman for the National Restaurant Association, objected to the ban, calling it burdensome and unnecessary.

Trans fats are believed to be harmful because they contribute to heart disease by raising bad cholesterol and lowering good cholesterol at the same time. Some experts say that makes trans fats worse than saturated fat.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who banned smoking in bars and restaurants during his first term, has dismissed cries that New York is crossing a line by trying to legislate diets.

"Nobody wants to take away your french fries and hamburgers — I love those things, too," he said recently. "But if you can make them with something that is less damaging to your health, we should do that." SARA KUGLER (AP)

Now Where Did I Put That Hole in the Wall?

A man who had broke into a Fort Myers, Fla., post office with a sledgehammer forgot how he got in and couldn't find his way out, WNBC-TV reported. Anthony Armstrong broke through the wall of the facility with the tool and, from then on, was being filmed by security cameras, officials said. Once inside, the video shows, he couldn't find his way out, authorities said. Armstrong eventually called 911 in desperation and told authorities he needed their help after three men chased him into the post office. But police saw the sledgehammer and checked the security footage, discredited his story, and then arrested him. (EXPRESS)

SERMONS

I No Longer Use a Gun. Or My Brain

The pastor of a Mount Airy, N.C., church accused of brandishing a gun as part of his sermon is free on bond after being charged with possession of a firearm by a felon. Jerry Wayne "Dusty" Whitaker was convicted in Virginia in 1990 of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and possession of a firearm during drug trafficking. Whitaker told members of his Victory Baptist Church he was a retired U.S. marshal who was injured in the line of duty, said Garry Searce, trustee chairman at Victory Baptist. In September, Whitaker reportedly brought a handgun and a shoulder holster to a service. "He was driving home his point," Searce said. "He said he was no longer a pistol-toting U.S. marshal." (AP)

"How is the loggerhead sea turtle this evening? Oh, would you recommend the humpback whale? Actually, I think I'll have this alligator-head dish." Such is the life of a waiter at the Huifu Fine-Food Restaurant in Huangshan, China. This Fish Is Growing on Me

A Derbyshire, England, man has broken his own record for catching the world's heaviest carp — by catching the same fish he set the previous record with, the Sun reported. After he originally set the record at a Bordeaux, France, lake, Gary Hughes was awarded a free return vacation. On that trip, he went fishing again and caught the 87-pound, 2-ounce fish, which had grown from the first time he caught it. (EXPRESS)

RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS STUDY AT THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH

The goal of this study is to define clinically important changes in RA activity, from the patient's perspective.

We are interested in learning how much of an improvement in pain, stiffness, function, and other symptoms is needed before patients recognize the change as an important improvement.

The study involves 2 visits to the NIH over 1-4 months for physical exams, written questionnaires, computer-based exercise, and blood draws. No treatment is provided.

We are particularly interested in patients starting prednisone, methotrexate, leflunomide, or anti-TNF drugs.

Gates: U.S. Not Winning War in Iraq

Confirmation all but certain after panel OKs Defense nominee

WASHINGTON | Robert Gates, seemingly clinching confirmation as the new secretary of defense, said Tuesday the United States is not winning in Iraq and he's confident President Bush will listen to his ideas about forging a new war strategy.

He won speedy and unanimous approval from the Senate Armed Services Committee after five hours of testimony, a bipartisan show of support that suggested how eager many lawmakers are to replace Donald H. Rumsfeld at the Pentagon. The full Senate could seal Gates' confirmation as early as Wednesday.

"In my view, all options are on the table, in terms of how we address this problem in Iraq," he told the committee.

But he also acknowledged the complexity of the challenge.

The senators voted 24-0 to support the nomination to replace

APPROVED: Robert Gates won the unanimous consent of a Senate panel Tuesday to become the next secretary of defense.

Rumsfeld, who has become a symbol of the Bush administration's steadfast course in a war that has long since soured with the public and much of the world.

During his appearance, Gates would not commit to any specific new course of action in the conflict. He said he would consult first with commanders and others.

When asked directly by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., whether the U.S. is winning in Iraq, Gates replied, "No, sir." That response appeared to contradict Bush, who said at an Oct. 25 news conference, "Absolutely, we're winning."

Gates later said he believes the United States is neither winning nor losing, "at this point."

New Mothers' Mental Health at Risk

CHICAGO | New moms face increased risks for a variety of mental problems, not just postpartum depression, according to one of the largest studies of psychiatric illness after childbirth.

New dads aren't as vulnerable, probably because they don't experience the same physical and social changes associated with having a baby, the researchers said.

The study, based on medical records of 2.3 million people over a 30-year period in Denmark, found that the first three months after women have their first baby is riskiest, especially the first few weeks.

During the first 10 to 19 days, new mothers were seven times more likely to be hospitalized with some form of mental illness than women with older infants. Compared with women with no children, new mothers were four times more likely to be hospitalized with mental problems. (AP)

Intrepid Back on the Move

Freed from river mud, historic warship docks for overhaul in N.J.

NEW YORK | Finally pulled free of its muddy anchorage after 24 years as a military museum, the historic aircraft carrier USS Intrepid was on the move again Tuesday, sailing majestically through New York Harbor, bound for a long-awaited overhaul at a New Jersey shipyard.

Just getting the 36,000-ton ship to move was a triumph for Intrepid's owners and the tugboat operators, who had to quit a previous attempt on Nov. 6, when the carrier's rudder and four giant screws dug into the mud.

New Yorkers who have come to know the Intrepid as a popular tourist attraction drawing 700,000 visitors a year paused to watch from sidewalks, cars and skyscraper windows as the storied veteran of three wars inched away from its dock.

Escorted by a fireboat shooting streams of red, white and blue, the Intrepid paused at the World Trade

Ala. Mom, Boyfriend Held in Boy's Killing

Police to charge both after ruling stolen car report was a hoax

GADSDEN, ALA. | A mother's report that her 5-year-old son was asleep in the back of a car when it was stolen was a hoax, and she and her boyfriend will be charged with murder, authorities said Tuesday.

Geontae Glass's body was found Tuesday with the car in a residential garage, a day after the car was reported stolen.

Police were holding Shalinda Glass, 25, and Kevin Andre Towles, who is believed to own the house where the body was found, Sheriff James Hayes said.

Glass had reported Monday morning that her car was stolen from the parking lot of a convenience store in Albertville in neighboring Marshall

Court OKs Policy Favoring Hawaii Natives in School

SAN FRANCISCO | A private school in Hawaii can favor Hawaiian natives for admission as a means of giving a helping hand to a downtrodden indigenous population, a divided federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

The decision by a 15-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned an earlier ruling by three of the same judges that the Kamehameha Schools policy amounted to unlawful discrimination.

In Tuesday's decision, the majority noted that the case was unique because Congress has singled out the plight of native Hawaiians for improvement, just as lawmakers have done with Alaskan natives and American Indians.

The policy "further the urgent need for better education of Native Hawaiians, which Congress has repeatedly identified as necessary," the court said. (AP)

Iraqi PM to Seek Regional Meeting

Al-Maliki shifts gears on gaining more input on Iraq's security crisis

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraq's prime minister reversed course Tuesday and said his envoys will talk with Iraq's neighbors about the possibility of a regional conference on quelling the violence here, despite opposition to the plan by some key political allies.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki made the announcement as more than 100 people were killed or found dead in and around Baghdad, underscoring the urgency of finding a solution to the bloodshed.

The U.S. military said three more American troops had died Monday — two as a result of insurgent attacks and one in a traffic accident.

Despite a string of ambushes, mortar attacks and bombings Tuesday, the chief U.S. military spokesman told reporters that all of Iraq would be under Baghdad's control by the fall of 2007, with U.S. soldiers and Marines and other coalition forces playing a supporting role.

Al-Maliki, a Shiite, told reporters that his envoys would talk with other governments in the region, most of them Sunni-dominated, about how they might help establish security and stability in Iraq.

The prime minister's statement fell short of an unconditional call for a conference. Previously, Iraqi leaders have resisted suggestions they include outsiders in efforts to settle their bitter internal divisions. (AP)

LONDON | The richest 2 percent of adults still own more than half of the world's household wealth, perpetuating a yawning global gap between rich and poor, according to research published Tuesday.

Russia Limits British Inquiry Into Poisoning

Extradition ruled out for Russian suspects; questioning restricted

MOSCOW | The top prosecutor said Tuesday that Moscow will not extradite possible Russian suspects to Britain in the poisoning of the former KGB agent Alexander Litvinenko and warned that British detectives would not be allowed to carry out interrogations in Russia.

Prosecutor General Yuri Chaika said that under Russian law, a Russian citizen who is accused of committing a crime abroad must face trial at home. "If they want to arrest citizens of the Russian Federation, it would be impossible because of the Russian Constitution," he told reporters.

Litvinenko, 43, died Nov. 23 in London, and toxicologists found the radioactive isotope polonium-210 in his body. On his deathbed, Litvinenko blamed President Vladimir Putin for the poisoning. The Kremlin has denied the accusations.

Putin met Tuesday with Italian Foreign Minister Massimo D'Alema,

Litvinenko

who had pledged to press Moscow about Litvinenko's poisoning, but neither man mentioned the case in his public remarks.

Chaika said his office would fully cooperate with a team of Scotland Yard investigators who arrived in Moscow on Monday.

However, he said that all figures in the case would be questioned by Russian prosecutors in the presence of the visiting British officers.

The prosecutor also confirmed that Andrei Lugovoi, a former Russian agent who met with Litvinenko in London on Nov. 1 — the day Litvinenko fell ill — has been hospitalized.

Lugovoi told the ITAR-Tass news agency that he was undergoing tests for possible radiation contamination. VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV (AP)

Tensions High in Lebanon

Military warns it may not be able to control ongoing street protests

BEIRUT, LEBANON | Shiite Muslims on Tuesday buried a young man killed in street clashes in a Sunni Muslim neighborhood as Lebanon's army commander warned that the military may not be able to contain any further protests linked to the country's tense political standoff.

Army commander Gen. Michel Suleiman urged politicians to compromise, according to comments quoted by several Beirut newspapers.

After another night of unrest in the capital, Prime Minister Fuad Saniora also warned that the situation could get out of control. "No one can impose control on the streets and this has been proven," he told hundreds of supporters who converged throughout the day on his office complex, which is ringed by barbed wire, combat troops and riot police.

Outside, thousands of opposition protesters were gathered near Saniora's offices and in several other downtown squares in yet another evening of rallies aimed at bringing down the government. Many have been camped out near the prime minister's headquarters since Friday. In a new tactic Tuesday night, they aimed two powerful floodlights at the government complex. Troops installed more barbed wire and other fortifications.

Lebanon's political confrontation breaks down on dangerous sectarian lines. The U.S.-backed government is supported largely by Sunnis, while the opposition — led by the pro-Syrian Hezbollah — enjoys wide support among Shiites. Lebanon's Christians are split between the two camps. Hezbollah is demanding the formation of a new government giving it and its allies a larger share of power.

The standoff shows no sign of waning despite the calls from the two sides for dialogue to resolve their differences. SAM F. GHATTAS (AP)

Green Building Bill Is Passed in D.C.

Washington would be 1st major city to make standards mandatory

WASHINGTON | Waterless urinals and recycled carpet could become common building features in the city under construction legislation passed Tuesday by the D.C. Council.

The bill, which is expected to be approved by Mayor Anthony Williams, would make Washington the first major city to require private developers to adhere to the standards of the U.S. Green Building Council. Even before the legislation, the District was already on track to open the nation's first green-certified stadium.

The bill requires all commercial development of 50,000 square feet or more to meet the Green Building Council's standards starting in 2012. The requirement applies to both new construction and significant renovations of old buildings.

All city-owned commercial projects funded in 2008 or later would have to attain certification, and District-funded housing projects would have to follow similar environmental standards. The bill also orders the mayor to adopt separate standards for schools — which the Green Building Council is now developing.

"I'm told that it's the most comprehensive green building legislation in the U.S.," said D.C. Council member Jim Graham, one of the bill's sponsors. SARAH KARUSH (AP)

Smithsonian Packs Rocky's Punch

Donated memorabilia to be included in new exhibition at museum

WASHINGTON | Rocky Balboa's boxing robe and gloves will share the same home as Dorothy's ruby red slippers, Abraham Lincoln's top hat and Thomas Edison's lightbulb.

Actor and director Sylvester Stallone on Tuesday donated memorabilia from his "Rocky" movies to the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History.

"I was getting old, but I didn't think I would be with the dinosaurs so soon," Stallone said. "Actually, I'm really unbelievably overwhelmed."

Stallone, 60, wore the red and yellow boxing robe in 1976's "Rocky." He also donated a black hat and a pair of autographed boxing gloves from "Rocky II" and shoes and his red, white and blue boxing shorts from "Rocky III."

Package Closes Streets Near the White House

WASHINGTON | Streets around the White House were closed for about two hours Tuesday after a woman threw a package into the courtyard of the adjacent Old Executive Office Building.

The woman was taken into custody and was charged with disorderly conduct, Secret Service spokesman Darrin Blackford said. He said the package contained nothing threatening.

The president was in the White House at the time of the incident.

Streets were closed along Pennsylvania Avenue, between 17th and 18th streets, and along 17th Street between State Place and H Street. (AP)

Close Eye on Dollar's Slide

Strength of holiday sales could influence currency's next turn

NEW YORK | While you're out battling the crowds at the mall or shopping for hot toys this holiday season, what you're buying and how much of it could influence the dollar's future moves.

In addition to dictating the level of retailers' profits, sales volumes this Christmas could signal whether consumers once again are riding to the rescue of an economy that is showing signs of slowing dramatically. And that may have great sway over what the Federal Reserve decides to do with interest rates in the months ahead.

That matters for the dollar, since its recent plunge largely has been Whether holiday sales soar or slump could also impact interest rate moves.

sparked by fears that investors will cash out of dollar-denominated assets as U.S. rates decline.

For most of this year, the dollar's slide has been overshadowed by bigger market news: the rally that boosted major stock indexes to levels not seen since the dot-com boom and the retreat in oil prices from the highs seen over the summer.

In recent weeks, however, the slumping dollar has become harder to ignore. The greenback has plunged to its lowest level in 20 months against the euro and is at 14-year lows against the British pound.

Should the shopping season turn out a bust, the Fed might see that as a sign of consumer fatigue and choose to cut rates in an attempt to stimulate growth. That could hurt the dollar.

Should sales top expectations, rates may remain steady or go up to contain inflation. That could support the dollar.

Still, it's important to note that Fed actions don't always correlate with the dollar's every move. Most important, the inflationary risks that come from the slumping dollar can't be ignored. RACHEL BECK (AP)

MySpace to Rout Out Sex Offenders

NEW YORK | MySpace, the popular online hangout that has drawn complaints about sexual predators and other dangers to teens, said Tuesday it will develop technologies to help block convicted sex offenders.

MySpace is partnering with Sentinel Tech Holding Corp. to build a database containing names, physical descriptions and other identifiable details on sex offenders in the U.S. The News Corp. site, however, stopped short of adopting Sentinel's technology for verifying the ages and identities of its users.

The database "will allow us to aggregate all publicly available sex offender databases into a real-time searchable form, making it easy to cross-reference and remove known registered sex offenders from the MySpace community," Hemanshu Nigam, MySpace's chief security officer, said in a statement.

Parents, teachers and police have become increasingly worried about dangers teens can encounter at social-networking sites. The aim of such sites is for users to expand their circles of friends — and critics say those circles sometimes include predators. (AP) SAVING FACE: Tampa Bay kicker Matt Bryant's 27-yard field goal as time expired in a 20-3 loss to Pittsburgh was the first game-ending kick to break up an NFL shutout in 73 years. In 1933, Pittsburgh kicked a 21-yard field goal on the last play to secure a 3-3 tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Road Trips Could Always Be Worse

And for the Wizards, who are 0-8 away from home, they often are

WIZARDS | It's been a tale of two teams for the Washington Wizards this year.

At Verizon Center, the team can play with anyone — as it showed once again Monday night in snapping the Dallas Mavericks' 12-game winning streak.

Star guard Gilbert Arenas looks like the Gilbert Arenas of old at home, too. He's averaging more than 33 points a game. Not coincidentally, Washington is 7-2 defending its court.

As forward Antawn Jamison summed up after Friday's easy win over the Charlotte Bobcats, "The problem hasn't been at home."

Indeed, the Dr. Jeckyll version of the Wizards (7-10) turns into Mr. Hyde once they leave District lines. The results aren't pretty.

Heading into Wednesday's game at New York, Washington is off to a franchise-worst 0-8 start on the road.

At first, the results were understandable. Three-point losses at Cleveland and Orlando began the road woes. From there, the internal pressure seems to have mounted and the team has cracked more often than not.

Among the Wizards' road losses this year are a 20-point blowout by the same Knicks who they'll face Wednesday night and a 27-point thrashing last month by Monday's victims, the Mavericks.

The last two defeats were by 15 at Memphis and 18 at Chicago.

Most perplexing in the sea of losses is Arenas' play. His 33-point average at home shrinks to 17.6 away. According to Elias Sports Bureau, Arenas' 265 points at home in the team's first eight home games

ROAD WOE-RRIORS

Obviously, a team that is 7-2 at home but 0-8 on the road has some away-game problems:

- The Wizards shoot 48 percent from the field at home and 40 percent on the road.
- Their three-point percentage drops from 39 percent to 24.
- The team's scoring average drops from 110.6 points per game at home to 88.3 on the road.
- At home, the Wizards average 22.8 assists per game, compared with just 15.1 in away games.
- Star guard Gilbert Arenas seems to be the most affected. His minutes (40.2 to 35.5), points (33.7 to 17.6) and shooting percentage (50 to 28) all drop.

compared with his 141 points on the road is the second greatest disparity ever for an NBA player in that same stretch.

But it's not just Arenas. As a whole, the Wizards, whose average field-goal percentage is near 46 percent, shoot just 40 percent on the road.

"It's all mental," Jamison said. "We've got to get mentally tougher. Once we get mentally tougher, we'll play better."

If they don't Wednesday, there's always another chance to snap the skid Friday in Philadelphia.

Heisman Favorite Isn't Looking Back

Ohio State QB Smith wants to get through one more big game

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Having come so far in such short time, Troy Smith knows he can't rest now.

There is one more game in his college career, one more chance to show a lot of people they were wrong about him, one more chance to prove he's not just a football player — he's a quarterback.

The chance to win a Heisman Trophy this weekend is just another step along the way.

"This is the beginning of the end, but no one is looking at it like that," he said, referring to No. 1 Ohio

Troy Smith has had one of the best seasons ever for an Ohio State quarterback.

State's Jan. 8 date with Florida in the national championship game. "Everyone on the team is focused on finishing out the season. We're getting ready to play on the biggest stage and I know we'll be ready."

Smith has a 25-2 record as a starter at Ohio State. His numbers suggest he may be the best at his position in school history — a record 30 touchdown passes and 67 percent completion rate this season with only five interceptions.

Now Smith, largely considered the favorite to win football's top individual honor, is looking forward to bringing a special guest to Saturday's Heisman announcement.

"Just taking my mother to a situation where she's never been is great," he said. "Neither of us has been to New York."

He doesn't want to leave empty-handed, either. RUSTY MILLER (AP)

Caps Find an Unlikely 2nd Scorer

Pettinger's hard-nosed style is different from most talented scorers

CAPITALS | Alex Ovechkin is a marked man, and Alexander Semin, Dainius Zubrus and Richard Zednik are talented but streaky, with each facing scoring droughts, injury or both.

Enter winger Matt Pettinger, whose pedigree is hard-working western Canadian rather than stylishly skating Eastern European, but whose recent nose for the net has given the Washington Capitals the second scoring threat they desperately need.

In his seventh year with the club, Pettinger was lauded last season for a relentless, energetic style of play and a career-high 20 goals. That success was rewarded with a spot on Canada's IIHF World Championship team and a new three-year contract from the Caps, forging the confidence that coach Glen Hanlon said helps a player like Pettinger take the next step in his development.

"It just sort of makes him look and say, 'You know, I'm a darn good player,'" Hanlon said.

This fall, Pettinger, 26, has unveiled a more mature game, demonstrating a veteran finisher's poise. He has eight goals and six assists in just 19 games (after missing the first three weeks of the season with a shoulder injury) and scored three in last week's wins over Tampa Bay and Dallas. The Caps (11-9-6) host Ottawa (14-12-1) tonight.

"Matt is the type of player who's becoming more and more comfortable in his role as a leader and offensive player," Hanlon said, adding that Pettinger "could win the lottery of $25 million and he wouldn't change his work ethic."

Pettinger said ice time has been the major difference. Last season, he played a major role with a young, rebuilding team rather than a bit part on a more veteran squad.

"Some of the very best young players have [a scoring touch], but I think it takes some experience," he said. "Flying around and hitting guys, that's what I had to do to stay here, and I still think that's an important part of my game. But obviously playing a lot more you get a lot more touches and with that comes confidence." BRIAN STRAUS

In NFC, Average Is Playoff Material

Four teams with .500 records are vying for the 2 wild card berths

FOOTBALL | Going .500 gets fans upset, coaches in trouble and players released.

Except in this year's NFC, where a break-even mark is looking playoff-worthy. And a winning record makes you a Super Bowl contender.

When the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Carolina Panthers on Monday night, it created a four-way logjam for the two NFC wild-card berths between those teams, the New York Giants and Atlanta — all at 6-6.

So while teams possibly headed for 10 wins in the AFC are wondering if it will be enough to get them into the Super Bowl chase, mediocrity — not parity — in the other conference might well be rewarded with a trip to the postseason.

"Well, it's a crazy year, so anything is possible," Eagles coach Andy Reid said. "We're just taking it one week at a time; we're not going to worry too much about getting into the playoffs or anything else."

History usually hasn't been kind to .500 teams. Since the NFL went to a 16-game schedule in 1978, seven 8-8 clubs reached the postseason, with the 1985 Cleveland Browns actually winning the AFC Central. The other six were wild cards.

Reggie Brown celebrates a touchdown in the Eagles' (6-6) win over the Panthers.

But recent history has been more positive for such posers, with two 8-8s making it in 1999 (Dallas and Detroit) and two more in 2004 (Minnesota and St. Louis).

Klinsmann, President Of U.S. Soccer Talking

SOCCER | Juergen Klinsmann and the U.S. Soccer Federation are likely to know within a week whether their talks will lead to a deal for him to become coach of the American national team, a person with knowledge of the negotiations said Tuesday.

Klinsmann

Klinsmann and USSF president Sunil Gulati have held lengthy discussions about the possibility of the former German star forward succeeding Bruce Arena, who coached the team for 7 1/2 years and was let go by Gulati after the World Cup. No deal has been agreed to yet, the person said, speaking on condition of anonymity because talks are ongoing.

Gulati's goal in the summer was to hire a coach by late November, but he said in October that a decision might not happen until December.

Klinsmann, who lives in Newport Beach, Calif., led Germany to the World Cup semifinals last summer in his first professional coaching job, then quit after the tournament. RONALD BLUM (AP)

Former Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. talks with reporters at winter meetings.

Ripken: I'm Not A Judge

Former O's star dodges questions on steroids, McGwire's induction

BASEBALL | Cal Ripken Jr. doesn't want the steroid scandal that has tarnished Mark McGwire's Hall of Fame chances to do the same to his own inevitable induction.

"The Hall of Fame run, it should be a celebration of the player's career," Ripken said Tuesday. "I hope, if that happens with me, that it would be a celebration."

A two-time MVP who played in 2,632 consecutive games to break Lou Gehrig's record streak, Ripken is considered a certain first-ballot inductee. Tony Gwynn is also on the ballot and considered a lock for induction when the ballots are counted in early January.

So was McGwire, back when he hit 70 homers in 1998 to break Roger Maris' single-season record; the former Oakland and St. Louis first baseman finished with 583 home runs, seventh on the all-time list. But his refusal to answer questions about steroid use during a congressional hearing last year has tarnished his career and his candidacy.

On Tuesday, Ripken dodged questions about McGwire.

"I'm curious, but I don't feel that I'm in a position to judge," he said. "History will judge us all in some way." JIMMY GOLEN (AP)

The MDX looks great! But ... ugh ... it sounds like someone is playing "PopoZao."

After the 15 Seconds

MDX's features make it a home option for prenupped failures

ROAD TEST | For that day when Kevin Federline is living out of his car, let's suggest the Acura MDX.

Don't wish bad things for Fed-Ex. It's not his fault. To put it delicately, Kevin's pinata is woefully short of candy. And, yet, that's how this worthless-hubby, canceled-credit-card narrative plays out, right? It's K-Fed, David Gest, Ike Turner and Bobby Brown playin' Texas Hold 'Em in celebrity man-mooch heaven.

So it might as well be a decent car. The 2007 Acura MDX, the company's redesigned seven-passenger ute brute, totally represents.

For example: Maybe Kev will want to roll while listening to his new, dozen-selling album "Playing With Fire." He could do no better than the MDX's audio system, a brilliant 410-watt, 10-speaker surround-sound unit that plays high-resolution DVD-audio discs, as well as conventional and rewriteable CDs, MP3 and WMA files. Acura's jukebox is one of the two or three best sound systems on the market, with white-hot highs, super-clean bass, perfect instrument voicing and huge spatial imaging. In other words, this is the mobile audio choice for musicians. Or even K-Fed. Oh, snap!

Powertrain: 3.7-liter, 24-valve, SOHC V6, with dual-stage intake, variable valve timing and lift and electronic throttle; five-speed automatic transmission with manual-shift mode; all-wheel drive | Wheelbase: 108.3 inches | Measurements: 190.7 inches long, 4,597 pounds | Torque: 275 pound-feet at 5,000 rpm

And the MDX is pretty dang sporty. When the MDX's sensors detect that the vehicle is cornering hard with the throttle open, it will actually overdrive the outside rear wheel. This has the effect of sharpening the MDX's cornering attack. You can roll off the throttle, turn the wheel and get back on the gas early — the steering wheel goes feathery in your hands and the MDX arcs around like a big, shiny tetherball.

But, at highway speeds, the MDX just doesn't pull its own weight.

Remind you of anybody?

Lost Kingdom

Long forgotten, the ancient city of Lijiang is now a tourist spot

STARTING OVER | When the Communists took power in China, Beijing's once-famous city walls were knocked down for construction material. In their place now runs a traffic-clogged road. In the center of the magnificent Forbidden City, just beyond the last colossal door before the emperor's private quarters, a Starbucks has opened.

All across China, countless buildings and entire neighborhoods have been buried and built over in a dash toward modernity — the one-two punch of revolutionary communism and robber capitalism.

At some point, I became fascinated with the preserved old city of Lijiang, near the borders of Myanmar and Tibet. Nicknamed the Oriental Venice for the canals that weave through its maze of footpaths and narrow streets, the city spent much of the past 800 years as the center of the Naxi Kingdom. Once a major trading post on the southern Silk Road, Lijiang slipped away from the modern world. By the 1950s, when Russian historian Peter Goullart needed a title for his book about the region, "Forgotten Kingdom" seemed like an apt choice.

An army of white tile and gray concrete surrounds the old city. Phalanxes of shoe shops, banks and cell phone dealers are shoulder to shoulder. Taxis, trucks, bicycles and rickshaws scuttle back and forth.

The ancient city was in there somewhere, a gem wrapped in grit, Heilongtan Park sits undisturbed in Lijiang, a city dating back some 800 years. The tourism industry is taking over the city, which became a World Heritage Site in 1997.

The ancient city was in there somewhere, a gem wrapped in grit.

like a pearl in reverse. Sure enough, once I broke past the last packed corner shop and honking driver, the bedlam fell away. A walkway widened into a cobblestone plaza where children played. I strolled along twin canals, which eventually split and disappeared behind low houses.

The preservation of Lijiang was more accidental than planned. During ancient times, the city lay on the far, forgotten frontier of the Chinese empire. Distant from the capital, it was of little strategic importance. Consequently, Lijiang is one of China's only ancient cities not to have a city wall.

In 1997, UNESCO declared the city a World Heritage Site. Since then, business owners and town planners have conformed to strict guidelines concerning restoration and new construction in the designated zone. The upgraded status has also brought hordes of domestic tourists. Whenever I ventured along the central streets of the old city, I ran into gaggles of camera-trussed Chinese.

I wondered why I had been disappointed by the sight of Lijiang's ugly new city and all the tourists. Why had I expected any Chinese city — or anywhere, for that matter — to remain unchanged? I'm happy that Lijiang's old town is being preserved, but that very preservation is what's drawing tourists, who by their presence are changing the city and how it functions. It's a double-edged sword that slices deep into so many conservation efforts.

FIGHTING FOR DIGNITY: On "The Wire," Andre Royo plays the homeless junkie and police informant Bubbles with grace.

Game of Honor

Andre Royo brings humanity to his junkie role on 'The Wire'

TV | Walking back to his trailer while shooting the first season of "The Wire," Andre Royo was still in character as the homeless junkie and informant Bubbles — face scarred, hair a craggy black mess — when a real junkie approached with what

Royo calls his "Street Oscar."

"He said, 'Yo, you need this, man. You look like you need a hit,'" recalls Royo. "I laughed a little bit and I got emotional. I was like, 'Wow, he thinks I'm a junkie for real.' I felt validated."

On Sunday, Bubbles serves as an unusual reservoir of humanity as "The Wire" airs the fourth season's finale (HBO, 10 p.m.). Bubbles has long been one of the show's most moral characters, captivating in his struggle to fight addiction and hopelessness on a show that revolves around futility.

This season has focused on a handful of young teenagers in West Baltimore's broken school system. The final episodes find various characters fighting for the futures of the kids — and none is more affecting than Bubs' unlikely mentoring of a homeless boy.

Bubbles' emotional scenes represent a climax for both the character and Royo, who has taken a role originally meant for just seven episodes and made it one of the show's most popular. But as always on "The Wire" — be it politics, police bureaucracy or the code of the street — Royo's acting career has been a long road of playing "the game."

Royo, whose father is Cuban, was often told he wasn't "black enough for the black roles" or "Spanish enough for the Spanish roles." But he landed the part of Bubbles for the pilot of "The Wire" — not that he thought it was a big break at the time. The dense plot and lack of standard cop show action made Royo think "The Wire" didn't have a chance.

Like so much of "The Wire," the character of Bubbles was taken directly from the street. Ed Burns, who helped create the show with David Simon (a former Baltimore journalist) and writes many of the episodes, was a Baltimore police officer for years (later becoming a schoolteacher). For 15 years, Bubbles was one of his best informants. "In his prime, whatever happened in West Baltimore, he knew about," Burns says of the real Bubbles, who died of AIDS in the late '80s. "There's a lot of honor in the game."

Burns credits the appeal of Bubbles to Royo's sympathetic portrayal. "It's this feeling of loss that you have when you see a human being with such potential trapped in this world. He's more of our conscience," he says. "You can feel comfortable writing anything for [Royo]. You know he can reach it." JAKE COYLE (AP)

Hollaback Girl's Mash-Up Mess

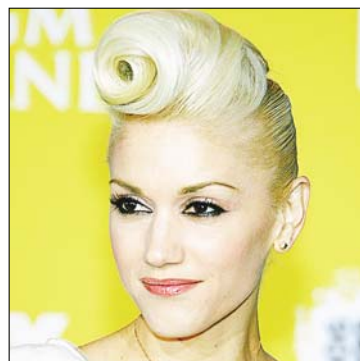

Gwen Stefani makes mindless music on 'The Sweet Escape'

MUSIC | On her 2004 solo debut, "Love. Angel. Music. Baby.," Gwen Stefani mined '80s pop, a love of Japanese culture, a bit of funk and kitschy cool to make an effervescent album chock full of mindless fun.

On her new album, "The Sweet Escape," she gets even more mindless — but, unfortunately, it's not nearly as fun. Perhaps buoyed by the success of odd songs like "Hollaback Girl," Stefani has taken kitsch to a new level on her sophomore LP.

"Don't get it twisted, don't get clever, this is the craziest ... ever," Stefani croons in "Don't Get It Twisted." But just because it's crazy and daring doesn't mean it's something you'd want to listen to. Too often the album comes off like a tortured trip inside a musical funhouse — trippy and exhilarating at times, but after a while, just plain annoying. A prime example is the first single. On "Wind It Up," she mixes the yodeling from "The Sound of Music" with whirring bass sounds from the Neptunes.

There are some bright moments. She teams up with Akon for the title track, a perfect pop song. "Now That You Got It" is a sexy R&B taunt from Swizz Beatz. She also links with her No Doubt buddy Tony Kanal for the solid tracks "4 in the Morning" and "Fluorescent."

AND LENO STILL STINKS: David Letterman isn't going anywhere. CBS signed the late-night funnyman to a contract to stay on the air until at least 2010. Letterman is expected to make somewhere north of $30 million a year. (AP)

Reality Still Bites

‘Twentyfourseven’ is the latest brain-dead MTV reality show

NEW FAKE STARS | The new documentary series “Twentyfourseven” (10:30 p.m., MTV) follows seven young friends as they try to succeed in Hollywood. But don’t go looking for a rags-to-riches story here. By any measure, these guys already seem well set. They have their run of clubs, throw hideously expensive parties and front their own rock ‘n’ roll bands. One guy has already produced and directed his own film. And, this being MTV, they are all pretty photogenic. The whole point of this exercise is to sell a young audience on these guys as “the players” of the future. This is pure product placement with humans as the product. It’s all rather sad — a variation on “Entourage” without any laughs. If any “star” emerges from “Twentyfourseven,” it will probably be Cipes, the hippy musician discovered playing on the streets of Venice Beach. He talks like a man-child and spouts New Age nonsense. He seems to keep a baby snake in his hair, even in the shower. We shall see whether this eccentric or his band, Cipes and the People, becomes the next big thing, or whether Cipes is a fly-by-night player in a 21st-century revival of “Hollywood Squares.”

ON TV TONIGHT

REAL-LIFE HOMER
THE KING OF QUEENS (8 p.m., CBS) returns, and two episodes air tonight. In the first “King,” Carrie (Leah Remini) asks Doug (Kevin James) to find a lucrative place for their tax refund. And true to his cartoon character, he invests in an ice-cream truck. This is interesting, given that only last week, Homer Simpson, a real cartoon character, took a similar career path.

MAKE A ‘BREAK’
Hopper takes a hostage on DAY BREAK (9 p.m., ABC).

HER LENS SEES DEAD PEOPLE
Allison’s camera yields ghostly imagery on MEDIUM (10 p.m., NBC).

DO-GOODERS OR BUMS?
Scheduled on PRIMETIME (10 p.m., ABC):

CROWN FOUND: “King of Queens” returns to CBS with two new episodes.

A hidden-camera expose reveals the difference between good Samaritans and indifferent strangers.

SURF’S UP, FOOD’S HOT
A trip to the seashore to test breakfast menus on TOP CHEF (10 p.m., Bravo).

A Daring Young Man

Performance

A trapeze artist's revolutionary new troupe flies high

In his father's day, a triple or quadruple somersault was the most daring feat a trapeze artist could do. But after Cirque du Soleil gained fame with its theatrics and contortions, George Caceres decided the number of rotations in flight was not as exciting as the number of people flying in sync.

Caceres followed his family into the mid-air somersault business when he was 5, touring the world and performing for the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Now 28, he has revived his Colombian-born father's troupe with Cirque du Soleil's finesse holding precedence over his Ringling roots.

Instead of just swinging from one trapeze to another in a straight line, Caceres choreographed a routine that sends his troupe vertically and diagonally across a custom-made rigging, with as many as four of the seven members flying at the same time.

He freely credits Cirque du Soleil's resident production "La Nouba" in Orlando as his inspiration for a new circus act, but insists it's not a copy of that performance. "They have 13 men. I have half as many people to do the act with, plus I have women. They have one girl; I have five," he said.

The new Flying Caceres practiced in Sarasota, Fla., for a year before booking their first performance earlier this month at a circus festival in Grenoble, France.

FLY GIRLS: The Flying Caceres have five female members, unusual in the field.

Many flying trapeze acts consist of extended families that have performed together for generations. Unlike George and Krizia Caceres, who are third-generation circus performers, the troupe's five other members first learned the flying trapeze at Club Med resorts or circus-themed camps and had no industry ties. The troupe had to prove they were trained professionals offering a fresh perspective, not just a group of wannabes, Balch said.

With five women, the Flying Caceres also breaks the male-dominated flying trapeze tradition.

"A lot of people who do this have no faith in girls performing. They say, 'Girls are not strong enough,'" said Elena Egorova, whose parents were circus performers in Russia.

On the strength of a home-made DVD showcasing their act, complete with the skintight white costumes hand-sewn by Krizia Caceres, the troupe secured two contracts for after the Grenoble festival: a five-week stint with the Gran Circo Mundial in Spain, then a longer stretch back in France with Cirque Arlette Gruss.

Some older performers say the circus' shift toward the theatrical is the latest attempt to attract a new audience.

Flying trapeze artists maintain the tradition of going for the most daring trick, but they also cloak simpler moves in drama, said Norma Fox, who as "La Norma" once spun with a trapeze bar clamped between her teeth. "They turn it in more slow motion, turn it a little sexier."

Miguel Caceres' goal when he started the Flying Caceres in 1982 was to push the limits of the human body in flight. His son pushes those limits with more panache, he said. "It's more complicated. There's more excitement, more action in the air," said Miguel Caceres. "Today, it's not really how much you do up there, it's really how you do it."

Caffeinate Your Card

Business

Starbucks gift cards have been a surprising success

If there are eight people in line at a typical Starbucks, chances are one of them paid up before even setting foot in the store.

In the five years since the Seattle-based coffee retailer launched its Starbucks Card, it has become a fixture in the wallets of millions of loyal customers. It has also emerged as one of the company's most heavily promoted and hottest-selling holiday gift items.

Most major retailers have been offering gift and loyalty cards for years, but industry observers say few have seen so many of their customers hang on to them as long, use them as often and reload them as regularly as they do at Starbucks.

"It's unique in the sense that most retailers aren't the kind where you have that everyday purchase," said

ERIK CARELS
STARBUCKS CARD USER

Scott Krugman, spokesman for the National Retail Federation.

During last year's holiday shopping season, customers activated a record 15 million cards that raked in nearly $170 million once they were redeemed, accounting for 12 percent of the company's North American revenue that quarter.

"The card has exceeded our expectations, absolutely," said Sandra Stark, Starbucks' director of marketing program management. "We knew it would be a great program. We had no idea that we would reach 12 percent of tender."

Almost one in eight customers

Few gift cards are reloaded and reused as much as Starbucks gift cards.

pays with a Starbucks card these days, Stark noted. About 96 million Starbucks cards have been activated in the United States and Canada since November 2001, and customers have reloaded their cards about 38.6 million times.

Gift cards used to be frowned upon as the last-ditch choice of only those who couldn't be bothered with putting any thought into the presents they got their loved ones. But in recent years, they've become more popular as gift givers and recipients alike have embraced the notion that it can be nice to give people the option of choosing their own presents.

"It's just such a home run not to have to pick out something for someone, which they're going to end up returning in 40 percent of the cases," said Howard Davidowitz, chairman of Davidowitz & Associates Inc., a retail consulting and investment banking firm.

"It's a lot easier to use the card when you don't have cash and you feel like an idiot putting $2 on your credit card," Erik Carels, 34, said after using his Starbucks card in Seattle.

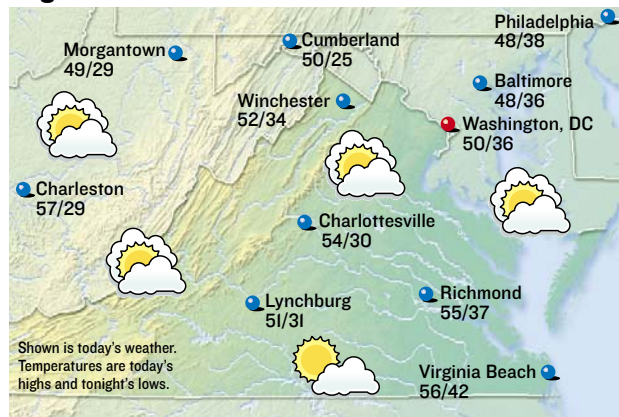

Companies cannot claim the money loaded onto their cards as revenue until a customer redeems it toward an actual purchase. They can, however, earn interest on unredeemed card balances, though Starbucks wouldn't disclose how much.

Jeff Phillips, who's used his Starbucks card regularly for years, wonders why the company doesn't offer card holders more perks, like a free latte for every 10 purchased. "These guys are so successful, they probably don't feel like they want to give things away," said Phillips, 35. "A lot of companies fall very short on that." ELIZABETH M. GILLESPIE (AP)

Get What You Pay For

We all have our choke points when it comes to money. Some mock the $17 mascara, some shell out $200 for moisturizer. L'OR DE VIE: LA CRÈME ($320, Saks Fifth Avenue) costs serious cash, but offers serious quality. Just a tiny dot of the stuff, made from Sauvignon grapevines from the Chateau d'Yquem in Bordeaux, provides the creamiest, most nourishing sensation this tester's face has ever felt. Within days, skin looked smoother, brighter and healthier than it ever had—and that's "ever" as in "ever." KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Beauty

Mix It Up a Little

Remember the chemistry course you loved to skip ... er ... hated to miss? Class is back in session with MD Skincare's INTENSE HYDRA MASK ($60, Sephora), a veritable chemistry set unto itself. Mix up a toxic-smelling cocktail with the included bowl, brush, gel and powder, then apply. Add water to produce a glorious heating effect. Ten minutes and one rinse later, our tester's insanely dry visage was moist and smooth. The acid gel and the heating mask allow skin to hold more water, causing faces to appear younger and hydrated. QUAND ROBINSON (EXPRESS)

Array in a Manger

Nativity scenes need an image makeover. While there's nothing wrong with bland, photo-realistic ceramics (why is Joseph always blond when he would have been Semitic?) or Precious Moments figurines, they're not for everyone. These four creative crèches (especially the one with the dogs) put very different spins on the original Christmas story. (EXPRESS)

1) The Magi might not make much sense post-Epiphany, but the rest of Haba's 44-piece, beechwood crèche has year-round play value. Baby Jesus is a little large compared with Mom and Dad, but since when has Christmas known any sense of scale? Not pictured: A herd of sheep, more cows, some shepherds, an angel and more. (ages 3 and up, $45, amazon.com)

2) It's made of banana fiber by a Congolese refugee, and it's so tiny King Herod will never find it. The diminutive stature—the tallest piece is about 3 inches—makes it less suitable for families with young kids, however. Not pictured: a shepherd. 3) For those people who have "God spelled backwards is Dog" bumper stickers: Big Sky Carvers' Dogtivity scene. And it will totally complement one of C. M. Coolidge's classic renderings of dogs playing poker (pick up "A Friend in Need" at allposters.com). Unveil this masterpiece with a double feature of "All Dogs Go to Heaven" and "Oh, Heavenly Dog!" Not pictured: a second angel. ($80, giftcorral.com)

4) While Gel Gems might look like gummy candies, they sadly are neither edible nor tasty. They're awfully pretty, though, especially when light shines through them. And they stick to most flat surfaces, from windows to fridges to cars. (Spread the good news to the heathen stuck behind you in traffic.) Jesus is a bit spry for a newborn, though—he seems about to take flight. Not pictured: a camel, another cow and an angel. ($25, shop.cathedral.org)

How About Ghanaian Food?

FOOD | On Tuesday, Express asked readers to submit suggestions about kinds of cuisine they'd like to see sidewalk vendors offer in D.C. Officials are now considering a vendor expansion, and a survey of residents and workers indicated that a majority want a greater variety of culinary offerings.

Responses ranged from Korean barbecue to "anything with meat." And then there was a request for Ghanaian treats like waakye (rice and beans), fish and black shito (a spicy pepper sauce). Now that's something different. MICHAEL GRASS (EXPRESS) opinions about the ban on smoking in District bars and restaurants that will go into effect in January.

Most Want Smoking Ban

Commenter Guy is among the ban's proponents: "I'm planning on increasing my visits to D.C. from Virginia because the bars will be smoke-free. For me, at least, the competitive advantage has now been given to D.C. Before [that], I simply limited my trips to bars or would go early before the smoke got disgustingly thick."

Commenter John took it a step further: "I am glad we will be able to go out and not have to deal with other people's nasty habits. I can't believe people do not support a person's right to breath without worry. Those of us with strong wills and a regard for other people should not have to deal with the weak-willed individuals who cannot control themselves. Smoking in front of a [non]smoker is the same as peeing in someone's shoe."

Some smokers, however, didn't appreciate the idea of getting kicked out into the cold. "I don't care if you shove me in some little side room that has an exhaust fan. Fine. Just don't shove me out in sub-freezing temps," commenter DC said. "Is it so much to ask that I am allowed to be warm while I give myself lung cancer?"

Commenter AUA took issue with the ban's timing, among other things: "Forcing smokers outside starting in the coldest month of the year. ... Could there be more of a smack in the face? Of all the decisions that have been made in their pursuit of the ban, this is the most illustrative of the Council's lack of consideration of the most basic of issues involved with the ban as written." M.G.

'Blood Diamond'

Director ED ZWICK was online Tuesday at washingtonpost.com to discuss "Blood Diamond," starring Leonardo DiCaprio and Djimon Hounsou in pursuit of a rare diamond in South Africa.

How long did it take for Leonardo DiCaprio to mimic the South African accent? Did he have a vocal coach? Leo worked with a very talented dialect coach. His name is Tim Mon-nich — who once taught at Julliard. He also spent a lot of time hanging out with former mercenaries, soldiers and smugglers. He claims they drank copious amounts of Jaegermeister.

How much of what you hear from audiences in test screenings do you end up using to re-cut your movies before their official release? My grandma attended a test screening of "Blood Diamond" in Chicago. She enjoyed seeing the guy get killed by the shovel, but she thought the film ran a tad long.

My feeling about test screenings has less to do with specific comments (unless they seem overwhelmingly unanimous) than it does with the feeling you get just sitting in a crowded theater. You're right about the first test screening in Chicago. We, too, felt it was a bit long and we trimmed about 10 minutes. And tell your grandma I liked the bit with the shovel, too.

Why do Hollywood feature films, supposedly about events significant to other cultures, so often make the typical Hollywood type leading man the primary, pivotal character such as in the movies "Glory" and "Cry Freedom"?

I'd have to take exception to your statement when it comes to this particular film. I feel that Solomon Vandy's story (played by Djimon Hounsou) is equal to that of Danny Archer (played by DiCaprio). Not only is the Mende man the moral center of the film, [but] he also begins and ends the story. The tale of a good man trying to keep his family together amid the chaos of war is a universal one and not limited to race or ethnicity.

A Message from

A Chain of Giving & Caring

We live in a big country, a country filled with people who are selfless and sharing. A country, also, where millions of us need and depend on the help and generosity of others from time to time.

America's Charities' role is to connect the spirit of giving and caring with the opportunity to help someone in need ... a sick child, a troubled teen, an unemployed mechanic, or an elderly grandmother.

Since 1980, America's Charities has distributed nearly $400 million to thousands of charities across the country.

These funds come from the payroll-giving donations made by members of our Armed Services, employees of the federal government, state and local, and large and small businesses throughout the country -- people just like you.

These caring people have designated a contribution out of their payroll to help a charity that, in turn, helps someone in need. It's a wonderful chain of caring and giving. We're honored to play a role in that process.

For each of us, individually, consider how you can get involved by helping to support one additional charity this year through your financial support or volunteer efforts.

America is a big country – and our world community is bigger. But we're also one human family. We all succeed and do better when we help one another.

And, when we help someone in need, doesn't it feel like the right thing to do?

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

Liberty's crown is missing a point. When do you think you would have noticed? When three or four points were missing? Maybe that would have been too late. And that's exactly our point. Most of us don't notice when our freedoms are eroding.

That's why we notice. We're the ACLU. Every time a freedom that is guaranteed by the Bill of Rights begins to erode, we're right there. Not to take sides but to protect the principle this country was founded on. Freedom. Guaranteed to all.

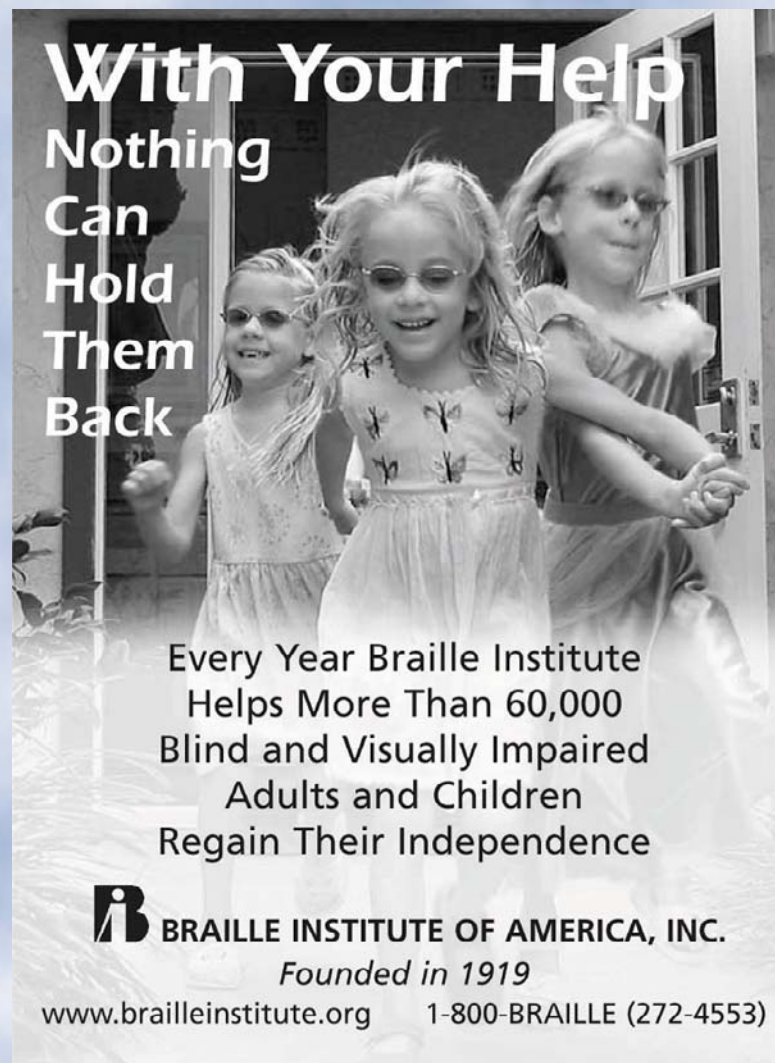

The ACLU has been protecting civil liberties for over 80 years. Help us protect them for the next 80 by supporting the ACLU Foundation through the CFC.

Freedom is why we're here.

A Humane Society Starts with You

The Humane Society of the United States has worked since 1954 to promote the protection of all animals. With nearly 10 million members and constituents, headquarters in the nation's capital, regional offices from coast to coast, and a family of affiliate organizations working around the globe, we celebrate the human-animal bond and confront animal cruelty in all of its forms both at home and abroad.

We work to reduce animal suffering and create meaningful social change by advocating for public policies to protect animals, investigating institutional and individual acts of cruelty and abuse, supporting the efforts of local animal shelters and humane organizations, educating consumers and retailers, and sending animal rescue teams into the field whenever and wherever disaster strikes.

We have made many advances on behalf of animals, but our work is far from done—and we need your help to continue creating a truly humane society.
